Name	Compare and Contrast
A.
A woodsman usually blazes his trail by chipping with his axe the trees he passes, leaving white scars on their trunks, and to follow such a trail you stand at your first tree until you see the blaze on the next, then go to that and look for the one farther on; going in this way from tree to tree you keep the trail though it may, underfoot, be overgrown and indistinguishable.
From On the Trail An Outdoor Book	k for Girls By Lina Beard and Adelia Belle Beard
В.
Follow these 5 steps to blaze a trai	I:
<ul> <li>Figure out how dense the tre there, so you can get togeth</li> </ul>	ees and undergrowth are, and what is growing er the right tools.
<ul> <li>Decide how wide you want y</li> </ul>	our trail to be.
<ul> <li>Decide on the direction of you</li> </ul>	our trail.
<ul> <li>Cut down or flatten bushes of</li> </ul>	or undergrowth to make a path.
<ul> <li>Clean up any dead bushes of</li> </ul>	r any rocks that could trip people.
DIRECTIONS : Write the letter of the passage that goes with each statement.

A step-by-step guide to blazing a trail.

Talks about how to follow a blazed trail.

Does not require that the trail be clear.

Talks about blazing a trail by chipping into trees.

Talks about clearing a trail through bushes and underbrush.

Takes into consideration the desired width of the trail.

1.

2.

3.

4.

5.

6.

Answer Key

- 1. B
  - 2. A
  - 3. B 4. A
  - 5. A 6. B