

Name _____

Use sensory language to convey things that you can see, hear, feel, smell, touch and taste to the reader.

DIRECTIONS: Using precise and sensory language, write what comes next in the story below.

When the strangers' ramshackle trailer pulled into the empty lot beside our house and spluttered to a stop, we were fascinated. We watched, our noses pressed to the window, as one by one they got out of the vehicle.

Then, to our astonishment, the trailer began to unfold. It unfolded, and unfolded, and grew and grew, until—where only moments before there had been a rusty trailer that had left deep ruts in the scrubby grass—there lay now before our excited eyes the strangest house that we had ever seen.