Throughout time, transportation has changed drastically. At one time, horse and buggy was the main form of transportation. Some people still use horse and buggy, but it is less common now. Trains are another form of transportation, but they aren't as common as subways and busses. Cars and trucks are now the main form of transportation across America. In big cities, however, busses and taxis are popular forms of transportation because it is quicker and less expensive than owning a car. In other countries, some people travel by camel or elephant. You might travel differently depending on where you are in the world Even though transportation has changed, people have never stopped moving.
